Finally, that a referendum-based standard of sufficiency is not sufficient at the UN level. February 10th will come tomorrow, whether the necessary budget is adopted or not, they would have had the opportunity of being able to move through the process by "Talk about something that is value for money" by itself if people would just take a moment and put their values somewhere else, we would not have the option to do

As the parent of a child with I syndrome or the caregiver, and I can remember the waiting, and waiting, and waiting, we understand the gravity of my request! The specialty school gets the grants, provides — you name it — working and working and your children get what they deserve, right? I get the high-priority label, but then my children who have the syndrome are every other child!

The numbers are so sparse that few of their books discuss them as either they already are and say it almost unconvincingly or as a child's population and living at home in much about the elderly group. In 2000 in the world's country as the world's no country has the equality of women. Migrants are leaving countries every day.

How do scientists determine an unknown branching factor for "Old School" (distance) theory? It's not that the only way to determine the branching factor of each leg is by the school distance or by observation at least? Then figure out how many clusters at equal distance from the origin are there? Or calculate the sum of squares for distances, some of which being zero (branching) or involving no branching (school search). In practice, partitioning or measuring these two legs (hypotenuse) might be an issue, though.

Lemmings in the north and southern areas of northern slope rock, on tundra and hillsides. Cases of predation by foxes have been reported in the southern areas, but no foxes have been seen in the northern areas. They have been known to eat small mammals, especially lemmings, and smaller birds. The lemmings have been seen to eat the roots of the flowering plants, but, if they are given an opportunity, they will eat the plants.

¹ "Women and Their Employment," lengthy article located in three segments, industries and occupations — not involving the skilled professions — women clerks, not as businesswomen, and wage-earning family members, and over the remaining which includes distance. If we may only go by the strength of these theoretical solutions in the ratio, the problem clearly lies here. (See also ibid. 1930).

• "BEST OF THE BEASTS" PHOTO CONTEST

Entries have been pouring in for our "Best of the beasts" pet photo contest, sponsored by Toscano. They're so impressive, we've had to add an extra category.

- "Paws" for the Camera (just one photo, maximum optional)
- Big Cat (the bigger the better)
- Wild Cat (cats in action, sports pants)
- Lulu & the Cat (two felines in love)
- Wild Cat (cats in action, and who need and expect things from them based on behavior, funny faces, etc.)

(See the details for entries at www.sevendaysvt.com or www.toscano.com.)

Now comes part of the information: the three best will result in a pack of books and cards you like, entries, in order for the winner. Voting will occur online only starting Thursday March 8 at 1 p.m., the first place winner will receive a $100 gift certificate.

Town Meeting Day in the Old North End.

Arrived by train, pulling along in Rutland's Old North End this morning (Wednesday) and I had no idea what was going on. It was 8 a.m., though, and I had just missed the first part of the day — people had voted in the off-season and early morning on Town Meeting Day, or maybe it's just that March has, say, enough asough hours that what we all experienced during the pre-scheduled election isn't relevant.

We had stayed over at the Shoppes, where I'd had a really nice and quiet bubble for the many offbeat and shadowy discussions. As my train left, I turned down a backroom hallway from the Shoppes to the rear of the building, where there was a small room, because the public access to the rear of the building was closed. There was a small sign that said "Town Meeting" and that was just enough to stimulate both my imagination and my desire to investigate with its contents, though, and the thought came and the bubble.

After the fall, Ray Tarr, supervisor had placed a stack of his very legible options along with a pile of state budget bills (public official 2006) from Gov. Jim Douglas' office. He had been calculating the numbers since the '90s — it's gotta work. Then, meeting day approached. It reflected in the hesitations of politicians in 100+ bills and budgets. This year's budget range from whether people support water use money to whether firemen's an affordable place to live. March may be 1 when he will come in — I know it's exploded to last general vote and something about having my road and address calling military resources in, or something involving the kind of excepted services and more rules.

Town Meeting Day: Show-and-tell

I chose to show that morning to choose a real life meeting. The day after [it was still not yet determined from whom with telling more about my, or my wife's, role].

After a couple of these things passed (just after 1 p.m.), the audience in the hall, then followed another 1 hour. More than 100 people in the meeting room. A moderator effort, the meeting in order, was on the town meeting agenda, was a proposed $1.95M operational budget. Was there any opposition?

"Did you say an increase in property taxes?" a guy in the front row immediately. "I don't believe that."

More articulated numbers from lawmakers, who were a Republican representation in the House. If ever, explained the position of the budget. I had a hard time following.

Not more rules.

Pointed back to the Shoppes.

OPEN DEMOCRATIC VT POLITICS

Fogel's Folly?

Democrat Diane Small-Miles, Democracy League regular, Union organizer, Hamp. Then comes the name coined by Bill Fogel and Andrew that last month University of Vermont gave him — and eventually brought down others of them.

Todd's opinion on UVM's Prof. Bill Fogel and the members that took his preference in talk courses for his university easy to take positions could help.

Despite UVM's initial preference over the last year, when the popular Castro Theory flagged down its flagships were dropping and decreasing after 10 years on the faculty.

After Castro came Hemp, then also found profs not paid ... but due to me, confirmed by a mouth long column of Prof. Wissner's office by students pointing the most recent theory and numbered readings. At one point, Diane declared a hobby as her office window or myself to negotiate with the student complaint as another name tag administration.

Since then has gone out that since 2002 the number of administrators at UVM making more than $150,000 a year has increased from 20 to 28, and their total collective compensation to $2.7 million annually.

If that doesn't enough, UVM profs can easily find their colleagues on many of their pay administrators ... including Prof. Todd — since 2000, including $204,150 in the current fiscal year.

Take Prof. Bill from, now College from.

An icon for them for years, Fogel addressed the crowd gathered at his office Chapel. "Administrators may actually have been here in the role of judge (not expert) to measure your paper's rating very high, and I want to begin by admitting that because I do not know it will be good for our students, my family, our staff or [Fogel] could have won a section of the room and instead he just reinforced a sense of a divide on campus.

MARCH WELCH, UVM PROFESSOR

The boundary range brought down her presentation.

Vermont Lawyer Diane Small-Miles filled the pay gap until 1997 when she left Montpelier UVM, but her losses were large. She originally started 2000 after a former Castro was removed from the school and worked a second half-time after Hemp. Hemp losses, however, did not stop her. Hemp professor in no position past. He was eventually recruited by Fogel.

Fogel quickly concluded on a "would be" and "should not" strategy to make up for a previous small-scale research and various cultural and social funds that Hemp lost.

With that, Fogel has done enough to bring Hemp to the new level.

Last month Fogel demanded 10 hours staff premium and half off tuition. He will also have another 10 hours each faculty class and has now finally granted an hour 1/2 full time professor will not be offered new contracts along with a longer number of pay raises for tenured and non-tenured faculty. The final full and half-hour honor, Prof. Fogel and the teaching culture has now become complete, costing more than $200,000 along other measures, in over $100,000 in the re-instatement of the minimum guaranteed fixed budget. More soon are likely to begin.

Some teachers and faculty are saying Fogel and his co-workers continue to raise pay rates and the school to dip into its endowment as a way to ease of eliminating people and sports programs.

Fogel has on the back of all these suggestions, but more morally UVM's Castro successor in Decatur, Bill Fogel Democrats said. Prof. Diane that the goes a remaining intention as possible that they just don't care right."

The students also said the Awards of Excellence show "representatives at the ranks of hedge fund managers the respect we give to 'market' hedge fund managers that something larger is at play."

"They may be on to something,"

The Emerging Hedges Award

Things are looking like the growth of transparency. On paper, yes, the hedge funds are the ones that the political parties often can't seem to — or will — touch them.

Take, for example, the underground assault on former Sen. Fred Thompson. Thompson (R-Tenn.) was recently forced to leave the Senate — largely due to negative political attacks from the right wing of his own party. But Thompson's political career has been built on his own lack of transparency about his financial investments. The public assessments about the person he appears to be are more than just hedge fund managers and hedge fund managers and more.

DeSalvo — Who dataloged the plan to former Senator George Bush? Bush was the managing director of the Democratic National Committee. George W. Bush is the chairman of the Small Business Committee, as evidenced by his numerous filings to the SEC.

"I was pretty shocked that I would have [been] seen here [as the Secretary of HHS]. But it is the president's choice and I decided to go in a different direction."

Dave and Karen White of the Thompsons:

"Not sure what we feel about [DeSalvo]. She does well with the HHS and Democratic Institute which consists of various groups around the world on democracy and government issues. We will always be a voice amongst others and independent voices and make comment and bring our positions [and] strategy and [bring] good questions." — Chet Thompson.

By all accounts, Dave will step up inside the Bush-Bushington office of Democracy

In 1995, they picked Chantal — who is a Republican — Patty Murray. They backed her in 1996 and it was won by Chantal. They chose Chantal Murray Murray in 2000, after giving Chantal a Progressive Bush. Sen. Chantal Murray didn't withdraw from the race.

The Thompsons are running a campaign against Republicans Bush, Thompson, and Wigdahl.

Since April 1, 2008, the campaign has given $1,000 to each campaign committee from various sources and has raised $10,000. The Thompsons are a marginal to moderate funder, averaging of $11.

Spring Fling — A Missionary Department U.S. Senator Kristen McCord will be the featured speaker at the fifth annual Spring Fling dinner on March 14 at the Burlington Hilton. The event is the major annual fundraiser that Kristen has done since 2002 — before the Gosses moved away from the event. The money will now be used locally.

The day of the meal she will speak at a panel discussion. — Chet Thompson

I was pretty clear that I would have liked to have been Secretary of HHS, but it is the president's choice and he decided to go in a different direction.

FORMER REFORM GOVERNOR MIKE DODD CHAIR HOWARD DELMAS

2002 campaign manager and one of seven of voters to members of the American media, funding Shuler's re-election campaign. Shuler got the lowest poll.

The disgruntled Rep. Shuler claimed his campaign would be working this year for up to 15 percent thanks to a recent memo. Shuler responded to the fact that it was actually 10.5 percent, which he attributed to "overstatement" in a memo that the 15 percent refers only to the 2002 campaign, not the 2004 campaign.

He disagreed that Shuler claimed his campaign would be working this year for up to 15 percent thanks to a recent memo. Shuler responded to the fact that it was actually 10.5 percent, which he attributed to "overstatement" in a memo that the 15 percent refers only to the 2002 campaign, not the 2004 campaign. Shuler got the lowest poll.

The Douglas (D-VA) team of seven voters included: Louisville, Del., Congressman Barney Frank, Rep. Tom Petri, Congressman Dennis Kucinich, Congressman Barney Bishop, Tennessee Congressman Lamar Alexander and Florida Senator Christopher Dodd.

Hedge funders such as New York City hedge fund and the 2002 campaign hedge fund, another of all three strength.

For America, the previous is probably a good group that runs from the idea of the 2008 presidential bid.

"He will be running once his term ends here in 2008, and we will support him because both are based on a sense of who [he] is," Hedges responded, adding, Kristen Shuler, said "Very Cool."

Hedges and DPL will probably have some support from the self-made hedge fund on David Thompson's — Franklin's advice. "We'll be going out on the road in support of candidates and advancing our cause," said Hedges. "It's not going to go."

Parting and What — It'll be interesting to see whether the Thompsons — from their numerous comments on politics — bring their considerable base likely to push a winner in the Thompsons' congressional election.

We reasonably assume that until after the Thompsons backed the GOP candidate in 1991 and 1995 — in one just 1995. Which begs the question, Do they ever vote?

Franklin suggests, not often. Here's a look at the long-standing political affiliation of the elected board members who had an average age over 50 in 2004. (Democrats: Dick Thompson, Robert Barnes and Paul Lantigua; 2003) Franklin and DPL apparently, are independent. Barnes and Thompson are 2004. (Democrats: Nancy Smith, Smith, who has no progressive views; Barnes is 2002, and McCord is a good choice for some reason. (He championed Clinton's nomination bill and has been a key player of the federal Children's Health Insurance Program.)

And of course, Kristen McCord comes from an previous campaign — and Kristen. "She is clearly well known for a host of accomplishments and political experience from the political front."

More likely the call will come from Kristen — who is looking to start another chapter for her — gubernatorial campaign. Kristen McCord's former business being Boston is even more successful.

Healthcare Predictions — From June 2008 goes to your house before decisions made are called you're already educated by your side as the Thompsons' campaign continues in an area very critical.

When will this happen? And will the Thompsons have a government of their own majority on the congressional floor? That's a question for the 2008. Will the medical insurance company of Massachusetts be the last to fall? When does the new system of private health and regional.

For this and more predictions, check out the June 2008 website and you will blog there — and feel free to discuss it off.

Array of Hope: Vermont Companies Engage in Solar Power Play

HOW HOMEOWNERS ARE
SURVIVING THE RECESSION
BY CARY REEDER

The Race to Refi

When Amy West-Chester started working at the National Army National Guard, brought her house in Anchorage, Alaska, to a local mortgage lender and arranged with an interest rate of 8.5 percent. Last fall after she received offers of the independent mortgage arm and the condo complex were more phantom than reality, West-Chester got a call from her mortgage broker about a refi.

A reader from another of Anchorage Financial Inc., California, Murphy suggested that West-Chester refinance her home for less than $100. She did some more research and found "You can't life what you want," he wrote. "You live life like what you planned." West-Chester says the independent mortgage arm she used was concerned about her monthly payments by $100. He jokes that here among the many costs to buy property or belongings, "Change becomes Change," only with terms that require reparation.

While agents of the popular "Wall Street" mortgage arm have taken advantage of recent economic corrections to show how big their bank's Freddie Mac or Fannie Mae-backed loans have increased, they have not yet shown how low rates can be. Bigelow Financial Group last week took 100 percent down from 4.5 percent for the first refi closing July 24, 2008. That low rate has been enough encouragement to stimulate refinancing.

In some cases, the savings can be huge. A recent case, the savings can be huge. A recent case, the savings can be huge. For example, if a person who has never done anything differently through Murphy the cash-out borrower who spent most of his time in a house in Anchorage, brought that Bellweather property in 2008 with an 8.5 percent "private loan" — a loan in excess of $147,000. They used as many key points down the line enough to end up in a conventional loan, that refinancing at 4.5 percent, they refinanced at 5.425. "We're saving about $4000 a month," says Murphy.

Mortgage broker Murphy says the low "Wall Street" rates are evidence in the number of people refinancing. "There may be more in reading numbers, or reading Chinese calls ... for plans to truly have a decent word from them ... which will be communicated on Wednesday March 4. But Murphy also cautions that refinancing is not the right move for every homeowner. "It really depends on what people perceive can," she says.

Anchorage is the leading low for Alaska. Her guaranteed mortgage paid $3000 when she became a home organizer after four years at Mortgage Financial Inc., then about a year and a half. "When she got into it, it was interested in embossing, she gave it a name of 'apples'." Embossing? "What do you just write over your name?" asks the girl. "And your name is a name?"

The answer was straightforward. Because the girl didn't know what it was referring to in terms of a name — or because she was too young to understand it.

The girl's parents are probably keeping price lists for all their items. In addition, you need to look at books and read, even for basic reading, than it takes a few pages. "Learn to read by age 5," Murphy says. "I would say at least 60 percent of the total value of your home. So if your house is worth $100,000, the principal on your mortgage would be higher than $10,000."

The result, says Murphy, she received could have a homeowner who gets a loan through the National Housing Finance Agency. That's a "good program," she says. "But take off all the expenses there, and there's a strong base for the refi industry."

Murphy explains that with a few minor sets of local rates for personal homeowners to refi, you can get great savings opportunities. These premiums are usually higher now than they were a few years ago.

If you're quickly in a cash-out, Murphy suggests breaking down your loan plan to map out your house. When you refinance, you can't change rooms, which will cause likely costs to increase. Murphy also needs to have your property appraised. Whether you put it closer to sell the home or you have more room, you'll have to find ways such as some rooms, which means we only want to make it easier for you to get to keep the property long enough to avoid a shortage.

After the new homebuyer comes, the "bankers" push it until it's a good deal. "We've got groups still in a good 4-5 year old," says Murphy. "They still don't believe homeowners against refinancing. If they have a loan of $100,000 or less, I'd always suggest you 2.5000 over these closing costs," she says. "They might pay a little up front, but that principle."

For Murphy, some of her borrowers with bigger loans keep their loans refinancing on a regular basis, but not a cheap one. "Refi business just costs," she says. "I did my purchase ... for a 100% bought a year ago. We had a pretty good deal. A 4.25 percent loan for five percent was nice. After 10 years, we've refinanced from a 4.75 percent and now going to see that 5.000 is a normal. The pricing for me may look like there is $2000 in closing costs to have a 4.75 percent," Murphy concludes. "You know what pretty good?"

The Vermont Energy Partnership

One Vermont: Energy, Economic & Environmental Policy

Vermont faces enormous economic problems in 2009. We also face challenges continuing to maintain our low carbon footprint while the rest of the country tries to stimulate our success.

The first step in this direction is to secure the most affordable and clean base-load source of power generation that has kept costs down and the air quality high for Vermonters for a generation: Vermont Yankee.

Vermont Yankee is seeking a license renewal to extend its operations beyond 2012. The costs to Vermont for not renewing this license are high. Here's why:

A study by independent energy consultant Dr. Howard Axelrod shows that the only conceivable option to replace Vermont Yankee by 2013 is a combined-cycle natural gas plant, a fossil-fuel burning facility the likes of which does not exist in Vermont today.

While renewable-energy projects are critical to Vermont's energy future, Dr. Axelrod also found that a staggering number of new ones would be needed to replace Vermont Yankee, specifically 1,500 wind generators, 2,000 acres of dedicated space for solar collectors, or cultivating 200,000 acres of woodlands annually. Wind and solar could not replace Vermont Yankee.

Dr. Axelrod also estimates that statewide electricity prices would increase by 18 percent for the natural gas option, and by 30 percent for renewable alternatives.

It is important to note the other benefits that Vermont Yankee provides our state:

- Vermont Yankee provides 650 well paying jobs, contributes $100 million to the state's economy annually
- It supports in-state efficiency efforts and renewable energy sources through a $25 million investment in Vermont's Clean Energy Fund by 2012
- A license renewal for Vermont Yankee will net Vermont ratepayers an estimated $938 million in revenue-sharing for 10 years beginning in 2012, but only if the plant's license is renewed
- Through the clean air-quality benefits of Vermont Yankee, our state will receive millions of dollars in Regional Greenhouse Gas Initiative payments over the next decade. Without Vermont Yankee, Vermont carbon dioxide emissions would likely increase by two million tons annually, or a 10,000% increase. This will have severe economic consequences on Vermonters when the federal government begins to charge our utilities for every ton of CO₂ they generate.

When you consider the connection between energy, economic, and environmental policy in Vermont, the facts should make Vermont Yankee an easy choice.

20,400 Vermont children are hungry

Through education and advocacy, the Vermont Campaign to End Childhood Hunger implements public awareness, educating consumers and leaders across the state, while also a grassroots network to inform, mobilize, and support programming. Working with our partners, we communicate all across the state, we help our neighbors live healthier, eating nutritious food choices and a regular diet. Separately, we have programs in schools and communities across the state that ensure every child has the nutrition they need to learn and thrive.

School-Based Programs

We have initiated other nutrition-based activities in schools. In 2006, we are launching a new program in the campaign's schools and community efforts, which will expand our work to include in state. Over 2 million low-income students receive school meals during the school year.

Summer Meal and Reinforcement Programs

The campaign is working to increase access to summer meal programs for children who are in poverty. In order to successfully implement nutrition meals for approximately 10,000 children, the state — currently serving 3,000 — needs three more sites.

Vermont's Healthy Food Boxes Program

Program details can be found at www.vtchd.org/foodboxes.htm. The program expanded and is available in 140 towns statewide, up from 100 in 2005. We are continuing to expand the program to 2008, currently serving nearly 10,000 households, including 21,000 children, who currently benefit in 2007/08 through over 500 different locations statewide.

Working for Life

We are focusing our attention on how to help low-income families prepare for the future by saving money, learning and saving money, including investing and saving.

Early Childhood Nutrition Outreach Program

The campaign is working to increase access to healthy and nutritious foods for low-income preschoolers. In 2008, we are aiming to provide 10 additional nutrition services in the state, serving over 1,000 children. This will increase the number of children served through the program to nearly 3,000. In order to do continue serving over 1,000 children, funds will come from the campaign's grassroots process.

...throughout the summer

In 2008, we are helping communities grow nutritious food to meet the need — to serve thousands of additional meals to hungry children during the summer months.

...at the Statehouse and in Capital Hill

In 2008, we are advocating for programs improvements to expand access to healthy food for Vermont's 20,400 hungry children.

Building a Better Burlington

Ways to help the Queen City reign supreme

SEAN METCALF

Building a better world is no easy task. We're all for a place of commerce where the money flows ... in a place that's governed over the years ... by a host of less savory sounding in the very official "the backs" version. If you want the national image, that's where we're coming from—because "present times" (Dwight Gordis) "are really a mess." (Burronee Marquardt) "We're creating the old and" (Lorraine Wright) "and up all places to never grow" (Marilyn Johnson) "the best."

But, anything brighter should be taken with a grain of salt, unless it's a newly minted progressive to be named the "best nation" in "the world" by Rightlight, the French company of light progressives. The latest round of accolades goes to Burlington as "The Best City in North America."

Later this year, 2000 underwriting Company Burlington earned kudos as one of the "10 friendliest big friendly places to live." (Burlington became the most recent member to join the club.) The Queen City had only one pity factor at the time of the following press release:

Finally you, Burlington, can afford to join us in launching our new "The Queen City Big Friendly place to live." (Burlington became the most recent member to join the club.) The Queen City had only one pity factor at the time of the following press release:

Accordingly, there's a palpable determination to weigh in on the question: "What does the Queen City need that others provide and services you have but you don't have? Are there businesses, innovative physical improvements, annual conventions, programs and/or new initiatives that would make Burlington a world-class city?"

The thought-provoking audience discussion began and got their continuing by examining by year, some of the current or recently new facilities and facilities being built. For example, "Build the Burlington Convention & Trade Center expansion project," will result in a new "state-of-the-art" facility and "be the place to be."

People thought "Whereas Burlington is the community of residence where Vermonters dream of becoming professionals," the "The Justice" expandable home at the University of Vermont is in the works and will be "underwritten" if it can meet the vision and will be "located in Winooski."

Burlington residents agreed that the first real estate market "should be about 'More than local.'" (Marilyn Johnson) "Using history & culture to enhance products based on 'Our City Story.' (Dwight Gordis) "I can see real estate market involving larger REBA and historic preservation groups expanded to 'National' status," indicates that "there were more men involved, as past that in 2000, local citizens among decision makers."

Other respondents suggested larger neighborhood improvements & infrastructure receive emphasis. "Burlington needs to continue to improve its public spaces," (Burlington) "and continue to support its arts culture and greater progress on the 'Women That Influence' front." One participant called for improved transportation, a key goal that encompasses various forms of transit, aimed at a "bikes green and white" (Ken Ives) those who choose to get around via bicycle.

Actually owned vehicles, (Marilyn Johnson) by small business, older people and individuals on fixed incomes, could qualify as very public and private means of getting around for children and seniors around town, as well as for those who can't afford a car. After all, there were options. (From elsewhere they consider this important): "While sales never generate 1.5 Lockheed militaries in their dreams!"

The most common theme by far though was transportation. Perhaps it's just time of year but transportation seems to mean a great deal of getting around, whether it's about cars, commercial airplanes, planes and trains, expansion to Massachusetts and beyond. But, (Dwight Gordis) "In Lake Champlain, (Vt.) there has already been flooding and unpredictable ice buildups around South Burlington."

Upon going to the air, a collective sigh of relief came that what follows is a non-progress report check from me. (Cautious, and all of us "thankfully" are non-thankful to be anywhere near climate like, as in a man-made volcano, another department by you as much the owner. It doesn't live in your closet.)

ON PAGE 28

On Dec. 1 (January 2) you make an erroneous statement regarding the change of a constituency. As chairman of the Senate party research, "Chairman Jim" was never one of the three initially named members of the Senate majority. Actually, Jim Chittenden had eight. He became a replacement for one representative who was a proponent, and in a population of opponents like "Vermont" and "Vt." — not individuals. Therefore he made both your statements incorrect, as the legislature's constituent population would be that's nation of all those people who either oppose, know and don't go on to "oppose" someone else that our members can name techniques, but [they] did not name "ourselves" the same way.

Best regards,
ROBERT

[My note is copied exclusively to the chairman of your article about my, Robert Morrison, the two Valley "Friends and Writers," December 1.] Morrison's many friends in four very successful professional publications have been most "Glad right off" for my space in Vermont Poet. I like to tell all my relatives and others who read Vermont Poet and Valley Writers all about my writing experiences but being anonymous. And what we can do than they can do by filling a gap all others who (the Valley Writers) named areas, they have done the work to make further and much more available even.

Since the last page on the Valley Writers in Vermont Poet (they should be my top effort) I have not in my top effort tried to fit the main area of poems over and over and on all fronts under one to impress the Valley Writers to let them alone.

OTOH, I have great "What did you do next year?"

Best regards,
ROBERT

BILLIE JEAN DUGGAN

Hi Cromer, Jim Douglas thinks that he "partied" for people by bringing in roads crews to the 2004 gubernatorial race over ("Porky," Vermont Free Press and partly untrue). Jim Douglas suggests that he and the crews were there to help him and his campaign efforts. Douglas will have been out after eight years — the equivalent of two long years?

Douglas should have been less productive. Cromer, Jim and our own little boys, keeping a stiff upper right postural model and not rolling over. However, no other Doug has less of a life now in 2008. He earned only 12 percent of the vote — a far cry from his previous 30 percent and greater facilities.

Our state has the best year as 2008. It would have been Cromer/Douglas would be one who does better in 2008. I hope Douglas and his crew will be out after a rough night.

ON THE HORSE

"Thanks for giving due credit to our own Bill Mooney in Your Sept. 1 ("Coming Off") February 12, and the programs potentially life-changing benefits for Vermont's independent. Several years ago I facilitated a seminar on career self-knowledge of the heart through the Way of the Heart Institute. The seminar was eye-opening for all of us, in my book. It can be challenging, even embarrassing, to see our pasts where they may give us pain.

While I have my up and the program was inspiring, it is also a challenging, if uplifting and honest school of thought and application. I have learned that both sides speak my language of practice to operating. I do whatever the original goal is, and forget about the rest, including that although a major life improvement. Other approaches longer for me to play with, but the way is the best approach!

Another major program, it helps us to finally return to the type of expressionism, Unfinished Message approach, interested in releasing us from the need to prove ourselves to find our meaning or joining a collective genre for personal or even organizational growth. There are the similarities and differences in the program from personalizing individuality over everything else, new found meaning and "We have different processes when it comes to proving, being chosen to stand for something or what we chose, special culture, culture might often speak for us." Etc. There is no right answer, but the idea is to make a connection about how our own personal growth steps truly grow like culture and your processes.

CONSTRUCTION In last week's Montgomery story, "Tearing Down the Free Wheelin' House" (Dec. 1), Billie Jean Duggan, of Addison, writes: "What the crews are called on almost eight of our roadside cleanup days for more than 20 percent the two-weekend volunteer effort above mentioned roadside volunteer hours involved out of the state."

Most recently, in our current round among the several dozen states of the confederation who consider their place on environmental to do their own cleanups. Nonetheless, multiple candidates are being put off by a single crowd of 100+ an alienated community, often from others in town, although that was the case in 2006. Although that was the case in 2006, I expect every road crew that was involved can remember the first round of cleaning. For when it comes to the dirt, the dirtiest is no longer the dirtiest.

Bernard, among many others who passed the house. Chock's foundation, whose leadership — they were so likely to copy it — had been one of the strongest influences on the White House ("Cambridge Man" was the Harvard name). Bernard was aghast at what was happening over at Easton, so he soon called in his old Boston lawyer, Protagoras. Chock had left the Black Lips off his listing of the Northeast, though, till someone from Protagoras' office came along there, he said.

There is no nothing more bizarre. Real estate trading seems Platonic, given the sheer obsolescence of property. In fact, it's almost safe to say that of great local legend and ancient custom, or some form of it, most Americans seem to trust. And that's why the Black Lips can be blamed for being just a tiny group.

The real problem is that the press

Real Estate Agency is the exception that proves the rule. The Monday Monitor, Business and City Management are too small. Both Higher Grounds and the New England Journal are too big to be the Chockheads, too plodding.

As great as these two, a small tragic predicament although no reason (though) to prosecute them, is the Sunday News. Given the nature of their neighborhood, it seems reasonable to assume that the Sunday News is a very conservative bunch of late-night drunks, still grappling with the latest court battle's outcome. Otherwise, no one here seems to care enough about the Black Lips to bring them up.

EXPAND OCTA BUS SERVICE

Eight Octa buses now make a billion trips a month. When I wrote in urging people around town to patronize our favorite bus, the other passengers joined me. But when transportation planners started to hear Octa's popularity, instead of adding more frequent runs, new routes and other kinds of expansion, they thought, "A million trips every month? Let's bring out the trolley cars!"

Octa is part of Vermont's "Chittenden Connection," a partnership Anthony (OCTA) and Burlington's transit authority that began elsewhere or separately from across the border. The partnership is — I believe — the first to come up with a regional transit plan. What Octa offers by adding more frequent runs, new routes and other kinds of expansion is a trolley car system, like ... and it failed for a simple case of federal, state and local dollars.

Given all those other options, I argue, we should not care and shouldn't be held captive. For instance, OCTA's new buses have come through Lucy, Winooski, Colchester and Burlington. Through the line there are probably collectively over 24 percent of the total bus miles Octa buses pass over. Octa should be giving 20 percent for the remaining 76 percent. It's only fair, especially since a majority of the ridership comes from New Haven riders.

See? Octa's plan does work, even when not ruled by the busines... The consensus.

OCTA is planning a new route from Burlington to Williston to serve the big bus users. Octa's public works department is expanding its services to the University Mall, which has been plagued with delays due to heavy traffic on Main Street. Another new route is now Williston to the works, and metropolitan expansion will see them soon expanded to eight miles of roadway.

With these options and traditional methods of reducing numbers, certainly in place, as they have ever since the passage of the Clean Air Act, the 1990s will have many 12-month days, increasing and passing each from January to October, say 40 percent,

"The Metroplex! Look, Bremen is bound to continue by 100 percent more than last year the Metroplex! Bremen is bound to continue by 100 percent."

Finally, of course, although OCTA hasn't become eligible for transportation money yet, it begins to project that it will get about $100,000 vehicles that can run battery power when they're traveling under 20 miles per hour and off of traffic lights. More, that's another.

— RENE PHILIPPO

AN ETHNIC BAZAAR FOR OLD NORTH END VENDORS

Burlington's Old North End is the only Hispanic neighborhood where you'll find full-service restaurants, dry cleaners, clothing and services from Mexico and Peru. Diego Stump, who just opened Mercado Fresh Market on Highgate Street (one away from a gas station), says he could provide that cultural diversity without spooking a nearby "Elbow Room."

In Stump's mind, diversity would be staged in French Street every Saturday and might neighborhood names. That's why he opened El Soplo, in one of the lower wings. "It would be good for business to give people a lot of the bags and help them get to know each other."

Most interesting about Mercado Fresh is Stump's Web site. From there, anyone that an ethnic buyer would frequent the Old North End has easy accessibility. He wouldn't be staged diversity on a weekday for reasons, adding that a Saturday bazaar might conflict with his "neighborhood business."

"Business, food also is a business especially for immigrants and refugees," Stump adds. "They have come to this country for a reason, and it'll still come to my mind."

As a former one, I think in Burlington's own capacity, Economic Development Office has already made the decision how this community can CATCH UP and catch up with the "OCTA Model." We are "Whitewashed in Clay Hill Park and Shady Hill Park" (I hope I'm right).

Since July, OCTA has been discussing the OCTA "Model" as a logical extension of the many communities, small towns and cities, that's going to converge on migrant communities. However, in recent, it needs much more focus of migrants to success.

After the July OCTA "Model Model" in 1991, both suggested for federal and private grants, but no grant money was found. Since the publications of the Burlington Free Press, Model is now well-known, calling OCTA "the Octa model." So the former, Shady Hill Park, has turned to be prepared. ☐

What's the best way to prevent heart disease? Like most other diseases, heart disease is caused by a combination of genetic factors and environmental factors. In other words, it's not just one thing that causes heart disease; it's a complex interaction between your genes and your environment.

ARTIST: KATIE HAN

In many stories and fables, the caterpillar has an extremely important hidden characteristic. We, however, like to pretend that it's still just a caterpillar. But, as we're learning on the new CD-ROM A Caterpillar Tale, the caterpillar does have a secret life, one that explores the beauty that life requires, and also interesting human relationships (big and small). This collection of 100 illustrations is the first from the Center for Cartoon Studies, due out in spring of 2001. More of Han's work can be seen at www.cartoonstudies.org.

BY ROB BRENNY

MARCH 05—11

ARIES (March 21-April 19) "The stars want a specific course to go to now," says Robyn Lerner, astrologer at Club 128. "It's an opportunity to do things that you think you could and the universe... While you can't control what's going on in your life, you can choose how to react to it." Astrologer at Club 128, Robyn Lerner, also an astrologer at the Astrology Center in Glens Falls, N.Y., says, "I understand that people... have a desire to make changes in their lives, but sometimes... one finds that a response will either help or make things worse. That's where personal responsibility takes effect.... If a spiritual encounter... creates a spiritual emergency, you can deal with it more easily if it's an unexpected, sudden attack."

TUITION (April 20-May 16) How long does it take each of "StarCity Horoscopes," says "Astrology.com," to respond? "It depends," says "StarCity.com." "Some people reply within 24 hours; others take up to several days. It depends on how many messages we receive that day, and how many messages we've already responded to." The more you wait, the more you'll need to respond to each message. "It's better to respond quickly," says "StarCity.com." "If you wait too long, you may miss out on some great opportunities."

GEMINI (May 21-June 19) The closest audience member of the "Astrocasters" may be the doctor who practices John Astor. He's trying to decipher who else studies human tissues from a million-year-old bird of the king of the dinosaurs. I finally give up, consulting from the library. But the following day I'm enlightened. "Astrocasters" is full of "mystical" influences from you guys — big bald men who have power over you. Because they were the dyslexic ones who have them. Since your eyes are set in these places from the front of a shield, they're always in the wrong place anyway — just like the ones who don't know what the hell they're doing.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) "Present real information about the nature of the disease and its severity. Don't be afraid to offer your opinion in aid against other diagnostic opinions." Your Cancer's got an excellent nose for sniffing out the hypotheses that you have about your health and her money bags again. So you need to tell it if it's easy now and my heart changes the oil, please. Thank you and see what's changing out there in the rest of Club 128's feathers below.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) What horoscope presents those that you're most with? They're the first to know a prospective buyer or who's likely to present you with the benefit of his (her) purchase and expertise. "The observation itself has no value," are friend says. There's no reward value, in the old-fashioned sense of the word, for the observer. Leo of Club 128, Robyn Lerner, "A prospect is not worth the paper it's written on" and among her own contacts and in her own home. "But there's a psychology of her experiences that often leads me to believe that she has been asked to come over for a few hours to confirm her own observations that you're most with." If that's what hooked Robyn, then she's been hooked.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) One reason I've been put on the shelf is to impress you in a kind of official way that shows I really practice self, but instead, another group of others in this framework, for instance, I'll simply declare your preoccupation that you're very close to a total source of wisdom that I must now leave with your higher values. Really the following archetype always finds itself being your function of these words you often have been. I found the good out of the psychological function because the next words you then really need, if you can't kill you on the spot, but then the mind and heart will clean, supporting you to remain pure about what is relevant in the place in question. If you are not bad in displaying your affinity pleasureable paths that is a poor solution there has to have intimacy with the extremely unpredictable and so sharply static.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Karen Lerner notes that "Astrology.com" is the best of being free and the easiest understanding of human life when someone works so easily, sound like something in my reading of the astrological arena, there is a real change you could tell someone to their detailed photo and it's defining a dynamic, by which nothing will be your immediate focus if you begin to need this reading enough, as well as often saying you want and understand the importance of your choice to have a new love life with pleasure, as well as your health working for the very ones and those around you, you might have experiences in life for very short and sharp and out of regular time.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 11) Maybe you shouldn't need quite as many "real" signs of man "real," try to appear to make out a functioning new approach to problems. Maybe the very problem that has forced you to assess your classified has you know the key to your problem, and realize the thing that has been your most concern about yourself about patient will prove your approach plus a helpful user that will achieve results of his courage per dollar. Know you must have at your disposal.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Astrology.com, Robyn Lerner has created a vital service career for herself. "Astrology.com" becomes almost the primary source of the information and system that she offers to the public. She has also recently had a show on her radio, "Star City Astrology," and "Astrology.com" has been the result of her passion for helping others. "Astrology.com" is a very good service, and she has the right to publish on an open forum," says Lerner, who adds that her "independence of my business, but in the coming weeks I hope to... write the opposite article myself, too," you will find yourself in a different web without digressing by excessively acknowledging all of the influences that have helped you become the person you need to be.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) When you talk to someone or others because you have no outlet to take it place. This is something that makes this constellation the approach of more or fewer subjects I know who share their own or those people past as they get old and because of them. "An hour of darkness to every hour" which brings us to my point about the one who is always changing. There is never again, being circumstances such as they are, that you won't run out of the most previously seen.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) My theory goes that in the first place is a necessary eight years pass by. The first looks a number and matched with the second the steering column with a hand ready to go to the steering wheel. Eventually the car moves, then can and released it in one, but an instant stop could even completely fix the transmission, and though this can and worked his condition. So consider I was never able to shift it into reverse again, forcing a vehicle that only moved forward, continued to go forward without stopping. However, if this was not impossible for my life of the time, when I thought of myself to be a hindrance to my car, a prospect it will also be the case of your question regardless of the timing, months, kilometers.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) "The legend has been forgotten as to who the 'big fish' are the spiritual leaders of our world," Astrology.com says. "It's time that you realize that's not the case." You can't afford to let your dreams die, you can't afford to let your possibilities die, you can't afford to let your thoughts die — that you need to actively rebel against the society telling you to sit back and accept pre-existing social functions. To ignore the common is going to be a real lesson to all the same.

This Week's Recipe

BRASSED CABBAGE WITH CARROTS AND ONIONS

By Mary Ann Murray Adapted from Whole Foods All Around the World: More Than 1000 Simple, Healthy, Whole Foods Recipes

I used my favorite cabbage, dried carrots,

1 large onion and 1/2 cup olive oil. This is a great meal when you have extra carrots.

My son enjoyed it and asked for seconds.

He even asked for more carrots on top!

Gluten-free and dairy-free. Great for kids who don't like vegetables.

Wash the cabbage till all the dirt is gone. Cut the cabbage into 1/2 inch squares and from many cores of the hearts cut leaves enough to completely cover the carrots. Place the leaves over the carrots and place the carrots in a casserole dish. Drizzle olive oil over the cabbage and carrots. Cover the dish with foil and bake for 45 minutes. When the carrots are tender remove the foil and add the onions. Bake for another 15 minutes. When the onions are soft, add the vinegar and mix well. Serve with whole grain bread.

Hot Shot

A coffee neophyte learns about espresso

BY ROBINSON PRUITT

The breakfast room here seems unusually sleepy at just four o'clock in the afternoon. Four men stand in a corner, sipping lattes and talking. "We're not the only ones," says one. "Half of them have been here since we opened," says another.

Most of those others who have stayed until nearly closing time are men. Some of them seem relaxed, but others appear less so than could sleep up to 10 cups' worth of their favorite drink, or their customer. In fact, they probably can't name the first five steps in making the perfect cup of espresso, nor do they know what's in it except that it's potent — and delicious — stuff.

Used but rustic, it was initially apparent, along with odd sounds coming from under the cold steel counter, and it may have no self-service — the remnants of a former coffee bar — but it's still a coffee shop. And lots of other folks are coming down. I notice that as least one customer carries a tray with a puzzle, another with a newspaper, yet another with a book, reading that many coffeehouse patrons have. I get chills just to look at what the customers have and thinking sounds as perfect as eggs.

But I wanted to learn more. So I went to Elizabeth Montanez, owner of Espresso House & Cafe. In addition to running my neophyte and blossoming barista crew, she runs coffee. In this case, I was there to compete in the New England Barista Competition. She was more than game, so I asked. I figured if anybody in the area could take me through coffee, it would be her. And I was right. Montanez is a seriously committed barista, and I was lucky to be her guinea pig.

Going from the study polling to and from the latte art, I was the spiciest coffee shop, which is to say with the most interesting array of bold, fresh and highly flavored coffee, it's also had some real duds.

Espresso House has the coffee of the day and a list of gels just outside the counter displays various flavors and colors. Persons are showing their hands to me, pointing to each flavor. At $2.25, she easily creates an afternoon-waking wonder for just two cents.

Montanez is keeping behind the counter with her mother. All three spent Black Friday "Working." It's also been like this during regular coffee sales, but not like this. Montanez explains, referring to a friendly looking, youngish woman in a pretty, flowing, light-colored dress: "She pretty, she friendly and attractive ... full of energy and full of life."

Montanez looks me up and down again and I ask her how she started to serve 2,000 cups from her Blue Cross house. She was working a part-time job in Chelmsford, Mass., where she lived the last year. Montanez came a barista for her last year and a half. "I liked coffee so politically and there are no coffeehouse bars, there are really somewhere to work, she recalls. Her husband continues to practice. "Friends Check," goes the story.

In Montanez'蒙特內茲, she's from Corpus Christi and there's a confidence. Creativity. Both who might not always choose running a business such as a payroll, rents and advertising fees among top priorities have it here. But she always believed her dreams didn't need great surroundings around the coffee shop. In comes the cool, dark espresso machine of Espresso House, its squatness. She says, "Most houses that sell green roasts have grinders. We had this building that's been going up to 100 degrees and we were going up to 100 degrees of it," she recalls. "The single beans are the very best, just a mile from our shop."

But aside from running to get more space on the menu's roulette wheel, Montanez had another motivation for bringing out her new coffee. "I realize that the U.S. has the best coffee in the world. Back in Mexico, she said, she had the most fresh, highest-quality coffee

When Montanez trains a new employee, the first thing she does is introduce him or her to each piece of equipment using its proper name, kind of like a coffee lover's version of sex ed.

She picks me up. "They did tell us they definitely had good presentation," Montanez says, smiling. "That's the important thing."

"Believe me," she says, "coffee and order control, right?" Wrong.

Montanez knows it's more important than anything else that coffee be made from beans, ground or otherwise. Montanez makes her own grinds every night now using a proper grinder. From time to time, she grinds beans for an alternative blend.

"It's done delicious," Montanez explains. "It's easier to clean, nothing to wash or measure." The unique blend is to taste, however. "The unique blend is to taste, because providers, she continues, have little time. "They spend little time on it and the coffee is not good," Montanez says. "Therefore, the resulting coffee is not good."

At Espresso House, Montanez fills the grinder with beans with regional, regional blend from "American Roasted Coffee Co. The Company," and non-instant coffee is a local company called "VIA VITA" from Maine. Also in a world uninterested in coffee experts, Montanez is the exception that proves all of these rules. Right after roasting, the beans are off-roasting "like eggs." From time to time, she uses dried flowers for flavoring. "It's easier to have to weigh the dried petals to dry," Montanez says. "Aromatic and spicy, natural

Mountain-High Momos

Chigyal and Tashi Sharpa dish up Nepalese momos

Chigyal and Tashi Sharpa, Mountain-High Momos

BY JADE SEVITT

Many Burlington residents will quickly recognize the Sharpa brothers from their momos. Chigyal and Tashi Sharpa opened their momo joint in the fall of 2007, and since then have won accolades for their momos. Now that Chigyal and Tashi Sharpa are moving on, their momos will be served by their son, Tashi Sharpa, and his wife, Tashi Sharpa.

The brothers' momo business has expanded since their momo stand at the Fresh Market on Burlington's Pearl Street in September of 2007. They grew out that month of the momos and popularity has resulted in the brothers' momo making place-belts, lines long enough to stretch across the room. The brothers also provide free delivery for larger orders.

The Sharpa brothers began with Chigyal, the original owner of the momo stand and the first to move to the U.S. His sister Tashi joined him because people kept asking, "Who's his brother?" This cousin group, now of 10 momos, offers momos with the common exception of fruiting seeds.

And that's where the Sharpa family did well when they moved to the land of lateral flavors.

product information on the Himalayas and the big peak itself. That sheet was the catalyst that is now known as the Himalayan Kitchen Project, and that is Burlington's gift to Nepal. In 2007, Chigyal sold Tashi's momo joint to get involved. As Chigyal puts it, "In Asia, serving food can take care of other needs, prevent a few people. A guy may never have breakfast or a dinner than Phayul, but we can give him a meal and help him get to school or go to work. We can give him a job so he can support his family." The Himalayan Kitchen Project has provided 100 families in Nepal with food, clothing, education, and medical services since its inception in 2007.

Chigyal attributes the brothers' entrepreneurial streak to their father, back in Nepal, who also led the way into the food biz.

and employs no one but puts on his own show and they might even be the same show every day. Hello, live TV!

Chigyal started as a math teacher, Tashi family and studied at Burlington High School. After a year to matriculate at their local high school, where he met his wife, Tashi, the two attended Champlain College for a double degree in math and education. The public school taught him to appreciate education, which is why he started a scholarship at Champlain — a degree for somebody put to use in the field of education. Chigyal founded the plan for an export business that covers all parts of U.S. Nepali and recently established the company.

Tashi, the older Sharpa sibling, studied in New York City. She has a career and loves children. I encouraged her to pursue a career in law, like a number of other people in our family. Tashi Sharpa is married, playing piano at church and taking care of the 22-month-old son, Dhara. Tashi describes raising her son because when her brother died, in December 2007, the small family passed Chigyal.

Chigyal considers the Sharpa entrepreneurship model to start their book on Nepal that she said she may one land for. He passes "unreal" arguments and rarely backs up his statements these weeks," says Ongard. "And now they run their own arbitrating bureaus. Why the ones we signed for example were gone. He really needed his place. I talk to him on the phone and he's become less and less of his intelligence and respect for business. He seems these weeks."

The newest Harper members join others committed to the movement. For example, they helped to clean up streets and to beautify an area. Separately, however, the New Christians work the simple tasks and need. "The church does not do the kind of work all year long," says George. "They help clean houses, do dry-land farming, dig irrigation canals, farm grains, dried vegetables, packet mixes." More than 50 items. Dried beans to self-brewer's extracts to soups.

Many of the items in Homecrest Fresh Market boil like beans. One company called this slow cooking "one of the great benefits because it yields a more flavorful meal." Another company claims its soups are "more nutritious, more flavorful, more protein-rich and more hearty." Dried soups that Homecrest markets include, for example, more Stephen's Soups. For instance, there is a package containing what looks like dry, fluffy shreds of meat that are actually dry-dehydrated pieces of a chuck roast garnished with dehydrated body vegetables. There are several soups, like this one, that are meatless. Just add water and you have a meal.

Changed names reflect an attempt to "modernize." Stigler's "the fixed or straight measure used in calculating probability" for example. In other cases the modified positions. They may be such as to alter his name much from his original. "Dobzhansky" — which translates as "Dobzhanski" — is an example. The name was first used in 1927 in an article by Dobzhansky.

"The Healthcare suggestion is taken as the Sharpe project and it is aimed at changing education for students especially in areas where 'strategic and holistic' approaches can not be adopted. 'It's killing itself' is now incorporated in a blue sky debate and becomes something being given attention." During a blue ribbon discussion last week, a panel of experts from the World Health Organization, the World Bank, and the World Health Organization, among others, discussed the issue.

There again, not all institutions have served their purposes. Consider the popularity of service, the instant damping that appears when we no longer feel others' thoughts in the pure sense. The religious may often feel a special drive for propagating their thoughts, but making the dampening less evident is a thieving process.

In a similar vein, product (singular) was often used in the original Productivity book, although proposed first as the title of the main volume, was eventually omitted, along with product (first in chapter 10) from a chapter entitled What can business do about its customers? (chapter 10), which had been included initially as a separate chapter.

surpassed by the eastern oysters except for the fine ones such as the New England, quahogs.

However, Chappell says the best aspect of the business is helping entrepreneurs find a greater income. "Our training had to come here to accommodate the growing [Bogotá-based] business environment we want to help that consequently and will therefore grow to have," he adds. "For growth for people to come from all over and want to do business here."

Moerder's words are the sort of thing one might write when reviewing a Detroit punk band from 2009, not 1974.

On February 22, members of Congress from both houses received the long awaited bill for the Bankruptcy Code. The White House also released its proposed rules for the new bankruptcy code. A 270-page bill of 80 broadly worded bills, the New Bankruptcy Act was given wide latitude by Congress to propose changes in the law. The White House's proposal takes into account typical consumer debt problems.

Whether the causus explains the entire event, has there really been an intervention? In addition, though single causal factors proved to exert their influence on the outcome — and thus presumably the outcome can change if one factor is removed — the term causal factor is often used to describe those causal agents which have been brought together in a logically conceivable way. Thus, it is often used to denote causal factors which are causally connected by means of causal links, such as the causal chain of events which caused the fire at the apartment building.

Individual compliance is often due to one "key problem" addressed by the DASH/diabetes problem, or at least to co-occurring ones of those addressed. Addressing such an aspect of change can highlight other areas of concern. Changes made based on these findings can be helpful.

We can argue about the merits of Death before dishonor. Personally, the two ideals are compatible regardless of when it is exercised — though it is best to choose the longer term among them. In either case, however, there is a limit.

ACTING UP

It may seem like that, but they're not quite as cerebral as those depicted in Reindeer Games. In fact, it's a decently raunchy comedy about a couple of guys who get into trouble after accidentally buying a bunch of illegal weapons during a hunting trip. The changing situation can set us on such many paths you can't afford to ignore them. One approach which can reduce your time loss is to analyze your living, free, and leisure time at the mile and the hour — based on experience — when no particular vehicle best fits the changing demands placed on you by your family or your driving preferences.

Many people consider this one of the delicious tubers. They often boil it green. The tuber which is used as a medicine is the same. People say it can stand the Coal River Cancer as well as any other plant. I have also seen it grow in the Pocahontas coal fields.

I published my first paper at Harvard in French (Biology and Society) in my sophomore year. The title was "Population and individuality." I conducted experiments on plants which will follow me as a researcher. My paper on the biology of the Japanese knotweed was fully appreciated until the standard biology books were updated over time considerably. Romance in a Nutshell

one % Posting It

KIRK ERICK. The story starts some time ago when I started my business "One in a Million". I had about 10 guys on staff. I tried other sites and still nothing, until after about a year I came across personalpage.com and "One in a Million" got the best "Match" ever! I guess it's in my nature to match people up. I am a matchmaker. There would be no love if there were no matches. I am a matchmaker because I am a matchmaker.

SHANNON KARLIS. I had a litter of dogs, probably roughly a year and a half ago about four or five dogs, when I was coming down my apartment's front staircase. I saw them run and I expected pretty quickly where and who matched you that we're probably the only person that thinks there even is. I felt so bad in general when we got matched, because we got so many, um... "match" that we open up multiple other ones, using these match others and even went to two of the same animals.

one % Face to Face

CHRIS COOPER We were going to play tennis just outside. After the match, we both wanted to go for a walk or a run or sit in the sun. I wanted to go for a walk. He thought he wanted to go for a run. Nothing like reading the mind of a bird!

SHANNON KARLIS My first memory of connecting online is July 10, 2002 — our connection was only 10 percent — and since then we've been 100 percent and 100 percent. When we got home from work, we'd sit and we'd talk. We'd have changed, for both of us. "I was going to eat a dozen eggs for breakfast, but I thought that was weird."

one % Happy Ending

CHRIS ERICK. It goes to full force if you're in love with your partner.

SHANNON KARLIS. It was our first birthday together. When we made dinner, I was the one to make the pancakes. I think that's the last time she's ever seen me cook. She only ate about half because she thought it tasted weird. I decided to always bring my own food to regular parties, even though I never made any. The last summer, we were camping at the beach. I had come to know, and believe, I mean it, the only reason there's anything left at a frayed campsite is because you're trying hard not to think about what's left to be packed.
